Also, you will need to prove your Identity and residency by submitting identification documents to the DMV office after scheduling an appointment. The instruction permit allows you to improve your driving skills under a parental or legal guardian. As per Hawaii state law, you must go through a Graduate licensing program for the learner's permit. The Graduate licensing program has three steps to improve your driving skills, safety, and becoming a confident driver. For this program, you must present the required documents, such as a Hawaii driver's license application, parental consent application, date of birth, social security card, and two residential proofs. To obtain a driver's license in Hawaii, follow these steps: First, complete a state-certified driver's course and road test to operate a motor vehicle unsupervised from 5:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. As a minor under 18, you can only carry one passenger without a licensed parent or guardian. You can also drive between 11:00 p.m. and 5:00 a.m. without supervision. Phase three involves applying for a full driver's license after holding a provisional license for six months with no traffic violations or convictions. To schedule an appointment, visit the official website ( and select the "Make an appointment" tab. Choose an office location nearest to you and click on the "Learner's permit initial" or "Road test" tab, depending on your needs. For a road test, you must be accompanied by a licensed driver aged 21 or older, with valid insurance and a vehicle that has passed inspection. The road test fee is $8.00; if you fail, it is non-refundable. To take the written test, which allows you to obtain a learner's and driver's license, you must be at least 15 years and six months old with parental or legal guardian consent. The test assesses your knowledge of traffic rules and safe driving, based on the Hawaii drivers manual. You need to score at least 80% to pass. To schedule a written test, follow the same steps as above and select the "Learner's Permit Initial and Written Test" tab. Pay a fee of $2.00 for the written test, and you can retest if you fail. To obtain a full driver's license in Hawaii, follow these steps: Visit the Online Portal and select your location to access the AlohaQ appointment system. Choose the option for "Out of State License Transfer" and select a DMV office closest to you. Pick an available date and time slot for your appointment, providing personal details like name, contact information, and out-of-state license information. Submit your request and await confirmation of your appointment. Prior to taking the road test, ensure you have: - At least six months of provisional driver's permit - Passed any outstanding traffic violations or convictions during the learner's period - Required documents, including proof of birth certificate (school certificate or passport), residential proofs, identity proof, and appointment copy To renew a current driver's license, visit the Online Portal and select your location to access the AlohaQ appointment system. Choose the "Hawaii License Renewal" tab and verify required documents before proceeding with appointment booking. Pick an available date and time for your appointment, entering required information and submitting payment for renewal fees. Bring all necessary documents, including proof of birth certificate, to the DMV office during your visit. You'll need a social security card or Real ID as proof of identity and a utility bill, bank statement, or insurance document as proof of residency when visiting the DMV office. To minimize your wait time, schedule appointments during morning or evening hours instead of afternoons and plan to visit on weekdays from Monday to Friday. Be sure to allocate sufficient time for any road tests you may have. Having all necessary documents ready will also help speed up your process. You can learn more about driver's licenses, vehicle registration, and other services by calling the Hawaii DMV customer service number at (808) 768-9100 or (808) 768-4325. There are no questions yet, be the first! Honolulu is working on a new express road test service to cut down wait times. Starting July 10, the Kapahulu Road Test Express Office will be offering this service. If you book an appointment here, you'll take your road test just one week later. After passing the test, you'll still need to head over to the Sheridan Road Test Office for some paperwork. The Kapahulu location is currently only doing behind-the-wheel tests, but plans are in the works to make it a fully equipped facility. To use this service, book an appointment online at honoluluroadtest.org Oahu drivers often wait four to eight weeks for a driver's test appointment, but with this new service, you can get in line sooner! Kapahulu Road Test Express Office Launches One-Week Wait Period The City and County of Honolulu has launched a new road test express office in Kapahulu, allowing applicants to take their road test just one week after scheduling. While the express location currently only offers behind-the-wheel tests, plans are underway to convert it into a fully equipped facility for processing driver's licenses. Applicants who pass the road test at the express location will still need to complete paperwork at the Sheridan Road Test Office, located about two miles away. However, Kim Hashiro, director of the city's Department of Customer Services, is optimistic that the new service will help reduce wait times and meet public demand. The Kapahulu road test express office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, excluding holidays. Applicants can book appointments up to six months in advance, and each day only 30 appointment slots are available. The service is currently limited to cash or checks for payment. Hashiro expressed confidence that the temporary tradeoff will help evaluate whether the road test express location can effectively reduce wait times.
